

They'll Never Want to Prank Call You Again!

We have all probably been the victims of a prank call at one time or another. While the people who are calling find it fascinatingly funny, it can really get on your last nerve. You want to reach your hand through the phone and choke them or anything else that will make them move on and find something better to do.

The problem with tracing prank calls is that if it's a cell phone number, you can run into problems. Since a lot of cell phone numbers are not listed, you can have a hard time finding out who the cell phone belongs to.

But, with the arrival of some new websites, the protection which unlisted cell phone numbers once afforded prank callers is now a thing of the past. These sites will reveal, along with the identity of the callers, some in-depth details of their histories.

For example, at a normal reverse search site, you can enter the cell phone number and in a matter of seconds you will know who the cell phone belongs to. That's not all though. You can also find out where they live, if they have ever been convicted of a misdemeanor or felony, if they've ever been married, where they were born, and even if they have ever gone into bankruptcy.

So, imagine that a prank caller is calling again and you answer the phone. Of course, before they get a chance to start telling lame jokes or breathing hard into the phone, you begin giving them details of their personal life.

You might, for example, ask how it feels to have finally been released from jail, and whether the caller is ashamed to go back to his or her home town because of that criminal record. You could suggest credit counseling so that he or she won't have to file for personal bankruptcy again. You will probably be able to come up with your own embarrassing questions thanks to the information you have, and in doing so take all the fun out of the prank calls so that you're never bothered again.

Can you imagine what they would be thinking? Wouldn't it be great? This is definitely a way that you can stop someone from prank calling you ever again.

But the ability to know who your prank caller is can be critical for another reason. You may be the target of a really dangerous individual who is actually threatening you with violence, but your local law enforcement probably doesn't have the time or resources to track down anonymous callers.

However, if you have proof that a convicted criminal has been calling your house, you can be sure the cops will get moving to do something about it. If you ever find out that someone dangerous is calling you, do not hesitate to report exactly who it is and demand that something be done about it. You never know what that person's intentions are. Luckily, you can find out easily through websites like this.

About the Author

If you feel like doing a reverse phone search go to the most trust site for reverse phone searches online <http://www.lookup-online.com/reverse-phone-search>

Source: <http://www.zogol.com>